

- 9) The aggregate results of these studies suggest that there is a definite physiological/immunological difference between blue crabs in the more riverine parts of the A/P Estuary compared to more oceanic sites, which may account for the high prevalence of disease in the more riverine areas.